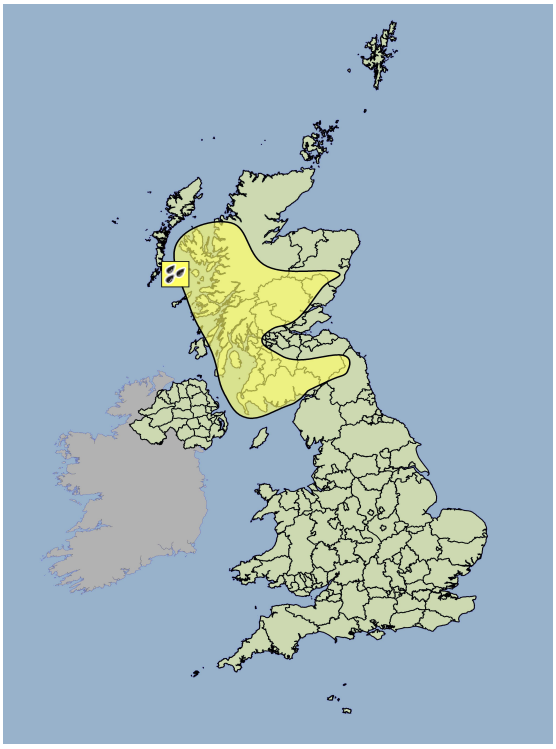
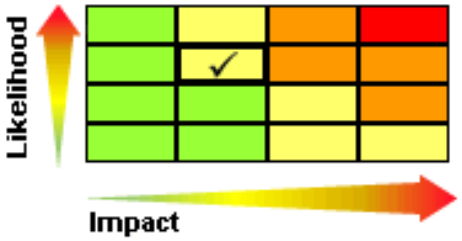
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A deep area of low pressure will move east to pass to the north of Scotland during Tuesday. The associated frontal system will be active, bringing a spell of heavy rain to areas exposed to the south and southwest and also accompanied by gales and locally severe gales - gusts of 70 mph are likely along south facing coasts of southwest Scotland with large waves also expected.

Many parts of the warning area are likely to receive 20-40 mm of rain, whilst the most exposed upland areas could see as much as 60 mm.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 04:00 on Tue, 26th Jan 2016 until 18:00 on Tue, 26th Jan 2016

Rain will become persistent and at times heavy early on Tuesday, clearing from the west later in the day. The rain will be accompanied by gales with a risk of severe gales for exposed coasts and hills for a time.

Please be aware of the potential for disruption to travel due to localised flooding.

This is an update to the Alert issued on Sunday, with only minor adjustments to the area and the end time.
